

Avoid Suspension of your Wisconsin Driver's License

If you have been arrested for a DUI, the arresting officer may have confiscated your license and provided you with a "notice of suspension" and a "temporary license." Suspension of your driver's license will go into effect after 30 days and you may face suspension or revocation of your license for six months or more – even on a first offense. If you refused the breathalyzer at the time of your arrest for your first offense, you face a one-year suspension. If you have prior DUI convictions, you face suspension ranging from 2 to 10 years. These DMV suspensions apply even if the underlying DUI charges are reduced or dismissed.

You have the right to challenge suspension of your driver's license by requesting an administrative DMV hearing within 10 days of your arrest. Attorney Mike Diaz can provide you with representation at the DMV hearing to help you avoid loss of your driver's license.
